FAVOURITE THINGS
BY PHIL BOWEN

Read and discuss the poem Lauren overleaf with the children. It was written by Barry Turrell at the age of nine.

Getting started
Give out the worksheet and ask the children to fill in the boxes with their current favourite things. Some may need more explanation than others. You could refer back to the poem Lauren to give an example of an emotion: the description of ‘the moment I get my sums right’.

Finding inspiration
Now tell the children that they are going to make their favourite person the subject of the poem they are about to write and that they will use some (or all) of their responses to the questions to describe that person. Look at the poet’s tip and emphasise that they could include other things not on the list in their descriptions.

Using examples
Before the children start writing their poems, discuss three or four other short examples from the exercise briefly pinpointing certain words, images, moods, etc, to help them flesh their favourite things out with description.

Perform and review
Once the children have written their poems, invite them to read them out loud. Then listen and comment.

LAUREN

You're a new daisy that's come up at night, your skin is a silk cover rubbed against my hand.

You're a moon drifting through frozen air, the lady who helps me when I'm hurt. You are cream just whipped.

You're a red lipped flower, the bit of butter melting on my potato, you're the hot water in my bath, rushing around me.

You are god talking quietly to horses, a rainbow in the sky. You're the moment I get my sums right.
